Summary: A poem from Renee to her "home" (Egypt)

Egypt's Sphinx

Far away and far from home

As my eyes turn back to roam

Over the country that always will be mine

It matters not distance or time

~*~

Oh Egypt, would that I were there

And of this Yeerk invasion did not know or care

But no, I'll carry on with that pride

Reflected in your Sphinx's eyes

Oh Sphinx, wonderful and free

As from your stone base you stare down at me

With those Egyptian eyes, reflected in a picture or a dream

Or even, perhaps, a memory

~*~

I wonder what the ties between as are

As your eyes seem to shine like such stars

And yet are stone. For you I'll fight

For you I'll carry on with the warrior's right

I will fight for Earth and man and you

I will fight because I hold the truth

And Sphinx, watch for me a time

From that country that always will be mine

End
file.
